ATTENDANCE
FINANCIAL AID RECIPIENTS

- You MUST attend your classes regularly and engage in the requirements for each class; otherwise, your financial aid may be revoked either partially or in full. This would result in an amount due by you to the University immediately.

- Financial aid, which includes grants, loans, work and scholarships, is funding to assist with educational expenses incurred while attending classes in pursuit of your degree.

- Attendance policies for each class are provided via the syllabus. Professors still have a choice as to whether they require/take attendance. A student’s attendance can/will be documented through quizzes, tests, papers, presentations, etc. without the requirement of the professor calling role each class meeting.

- Midterm grades, along with last date of attendance reported by faculty, will be used as the basis for determining your attendance and financial aid eligibility.

- If you have earned the grade A, B, C, D or F, then you have attended class at least once. The professor has had some means (documentation) to determine that grade. If no grade is reported or grades of IF or W without a reported last date of attendance, your financial aid package will potentially be affected if it alters your enrollment load: full time, three-quarter time, half time, or less than half time.

- Please note that although midterm grades are not reported in SUMMER, professors will report attendance at the conclusion of the second week of class for summer 1 and summer 2, and at the conclusion of the fourth week for summer 3, with exact dates to be identified each year. Financial aid will be adjusted if a change in enrollment load is determined.

- ATTEND your classes!!
