The Shepherd University Foundation celebrated its 40th anniversary and honored its eight honorary directors at a special dinner for 70 Foundation board members and special guests on November 4 at the Bavarian Inn, Shepherds-town.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of $500 scholarship awards to eight Shepherd students to honor the dedicated service of the Foundation's honorary directors.

In addressing the honorary directors, Foundation Executive Vice President Monica Lingenfelter said, "Tonight there will be no commemorative plaque, no silver watch, but in your honor and in tribute to your years of service to Shepherd, we will follow your example and invest in the education of eight deserving students. Each has been chosen by department faculty and best represent your personal areas of study and interest."

The award recipients were Amy Fleming, Cross Lanes, family and consumer sciences, the Hazel M. Hendricks Award; Jaime Schmidt, Martinsburg, education, the Dr. James A. Butcher Award; Donna McCusker, Harpers Ferry, education, the Ruth P. Thacher Award; Sarah Fry, Sterling, Virginia, education, the Dr. James M. Moler Award; David Lawrence, Hagerstown, Maryland, education, the Sallye Seibert Price Award; Paul Baily, Kearneysville, biology, the Jessie S. Hendrix Award; Tim Meloni, Elkins, history, the Dr. Lavelly D. Gruber Award; and Ashley Eye, Moorefield, health, physical education and recreation, the Dr. Sara Helen Cree Award.

The evening's event closed with remarks by Foundation President James Davis, who quoted a few lines from an Andrew Lloyd Webber song that he felt represented the hard work and dedication of the Foundation throughout its 40-year history:

IF YOU REACH FOR THE MOON,
IF YOU AIM FOR THE SKY,
THEN THE MOON AND THE SKY
CAN BE YOURS, IF YOU TRY.
