

Workshop on Integrity in The Workplace:

“Addressing ethical dilemmas by making principled decisions”

Why: Do you sometimes struggle: to make the “right” decision; and to meet your objectives/targets in the “right” manner? These personal and work situations, coupled with financial and institutional “pressures” to succeed with limited resources, often generate ethical “dilemmas”. These dilemmas often arise in public, private and not-for-profit organizations. Accordingly, it is vital for individuals and organizations to be proactive in fostering and living out high integrity values, standards and practices, in both decisions and behavior. Working and living with consistent integrity benefits individuals and communities.

What/objectives:

(1) to increase awareness of integrity dilemmas in our workplace situations; (2) to promote greater commitment to living out integrity-based values, standards and behaviors; and (3) to impart useful tools, good practices and biblical perspectives on integrity which can be applied by participants to address/resolve effectively ethical dilemmas.
