

MUSICAL SHOWCASE FOR SCHOLARSHIPS

Shepherd University offered music lovers the opportunity to listen to great piano and vocal music while supporting current and future music students at a Musical Showcase for Scholarships on Friday, March 3 in the Frank Center Theater. A post concert Meet-the-Artists dessert reception followed the concert.

The concert featured Dr. Scott Beard, pianist and Dean of Graduate Studies and Continuing Education and Associate Provost, with special guests and Shepherd alumni Jeff Martin, baritone, and Jason Solounias, pianist. Both Martin and Solounias benefited from music scholarships as undergraduate students at Shepherd.

Beard performed two short sonatas by Padre Antonio Soler. Solounias performed two works by Enrique Grandaos, including "The Maiden and the Nightingale."

"It's a very beautiful piece," Beard said. "You can imagine someone serenading a young lady from the balcony with this beautiful song."

Martin sang an aria by Giuseppe Verdi. "It's one of the great baritone arias about deception and betrayal in a marriage, so it's very, very dramatic." He also sang some lovely songs by Gerald Finzi, an English composer from earlier in the 20th century.

The second half of the concert featured Beard playing Chopin. "Of course, you can't have a piano concert without Chopin," Beard said.

Martin, a native Marylander, recently finished his master's degree at Peabody Conservatory at Johns Hopkins University, and is currently pursuing his doctorate in vocal performance at the University of Minnesota. Recent concert performances include Mozart's "Great Mass in C Minor" with Shepherd University's Masterworks Chorale, and the Peabody Conservatory's "Defiant Requiem: Verdi at Terezin." This past summer, Martin performed the role of Raimondo (Lucia di Lammermoor) with La Musica Lirica Festival in Novafeltria, Italy.

Award-winning pianist Solounias has performed across the United States and Europe, ranging from the Kennedy Center to Southwark Cathedral in London. Recent engagements include performances at Steinway Hall, Ward Recital Hall, and WETA public television in Washington, DC, Concerts from Kirkwood Series, and the Lisner Auditorium. He is also a member of the Washington Piano Society. He currently lives in Washington, D.C., and is pursuing his doctoral degree in piano performance at the Catholic University of America.

The concert offered an opportunity for community members and others who support Shepherd to come together to hear these two graduates and to raise money for others like them.

"One of the greatest needs in the music department is for scholarships so that we can attract the most talented students to our program," Beard said.

“Shepherd is often competing for the best students with other schools in terms of scholarships.”

Music Department Chair Dr. Robert Tudor added, “Jason Solounias and Jeff Martin are two of many examples of our former music scholarship recipients continuing on to create extraordinary experiences in their careers. We are honored that Dr. Beard and our alumni offered their talents to help raise scholarship resources to attract tomorrow’s artists and artist-educators.”

The evening was a huge success, with a packed audience raising more than double the goal of funds for music scholarships. The Music Department is grateful to everyone who came to support Music at Shepherd. Special thanks go to the Musical Showcase for Scholarships Host Committee:

MUSIC DEPARTMENT RECEIVES 10-YEAR REACCREDITATION

Shepherd University’s Department of Music has been reaccredited by the National Association of Schools of Music (NASM) for 10 more years. The accreditation covers Shepherd’s Bachelor of Arts in music, Bachelor of Music Education, Bachelor of Music in Performance, and Preparatory Program.

Dr. Robert Tudor, Chair of the Department of Music, said the accreditation includes approval for a new program—a Bachelor of Music in Performance with a concentration in jazz studies—which started accepting students this month. Tudor said he’s particularly excited about the addition of the jazz program and thinks it will be a popular choice for students.

“It’s a relevant form of making music that involves improvisation, composition, and arranging,” Tudor said. “The skills that someone learns in a jazz degree program can be applied in so many areas. It’s an entrepreneurial degree, that’s why it’s so attractive. Because of the skills you are learning you can go in so many different areas with that degree.”

Tudor said there are also plans to offer an adult jazz learning lab as part of Shepherd’s Preparatory Program and to expand the annual jazz festival. He said NASM’s accreditation report complimented Shepherd for having several strengths, including its music education, composition, piano, and performance offerings, the ensembles students can participate in, and the quality of the faculty.

“They said we have dynamically talented faculty that have relevant professional and current experience in all the areas that we’re teaching,” Tudor said. “Faculty are all very active in performance, composition, research, and music education. None of us are, if you will, ‘retired’ from the active, professional aspect of what we do.”

Dr. Scott Beard, Associate Provost, assists programs during the accrediting process. He said maintaining the NASM accreditation makes Shepherd more competitive.

“Many of the institutions that our students apply to are NASM accredited, so it’s really important that we have that mark of quality for our performance and our education degrees,” Beard said. “Also, most of the major conservatories and schools of music in the United States are accredited by NASM and carry that mark of distinction. We are very proud of our students and faculty in the Department of Music for achieving this accolade.”

Tudor pointed out that NASM accreditation tells prospective students and their parents that Shepherd offers a quality music education that meets a specific set of standards.

“For example, we have to prove our students gain competency in keyboard skills,” Tudor said. “We have to prove that our students meet a benchmark of music competencies in theory, aural skills, music history, and literature. Without the accreditation, you don’t have that pressure to create the multiple experiences throughout their education to meet those benchmarks.”

NASM was founded in 1924 and currently accredits more than 650 baccalaureate and graduate degree-granting institutions, community colleges, and non-degree-granting institutions.

ALUMNI NEWS

Jillian Alise Wiley (BME-Choral, BA-Performance, 2013) an Opera Studies graduate student at the Peabody Conservatory of The Johns Hopkins University, will present her Master's Recital on Saturday, April 22, 2017 at 5pm in Leakin Hall, Baltimore, MD. Her performance will include works by Rachmaninov, Wolf, and a performance of Samuel Barber's "Knoxville, Summer 1915," accompanied by orchestra.

Molly Getsinger (BME-Choral, BA-Performance, 2013) recently accepted an offer for the DMA in Choral Conducting program at Cincinnati Conservatory, and I'll be the director of their Women's Chorus.

Paul Cabell (BME-Choral 2015) was accepted to both the Boston Conservatory and NYU Steinhardt.

LISA OSWALD—IN GOOD COMPANY

Lisa Oswald (BME-Instrumental, flute, 2008) is currently in her fourth season with Houston Grand Opera, where she serves as the Company Manager. In this role, she oversees rehearsal and production scheduling for the entire company, logistics for all of the visiting artists, hiring of various extras and production support staff, among other things.

This season, HGO is producing seven main stage operas, one of which is a world premier, for a total of about 50 performances. In addition to these main stage operas, they have several fully staged "HGOCO" productions (their community outreach branch), a full-time training program for young artists, and a robust series of performances for schools—over 200 in school performances each year!

"Most of our artists travel to Houston to work for us, so we take care of anywhere from 50-100 visiting artists each season (travel, housing, work visas, etc.)," Oswald explains. "Fortunately I have a support staff of three to help manage all of these people and projects, but we still stay pretty busy!"

Lisa Oswald attended Shepherd University on a full-tuition scholarship, receiving her BME-Instrumental in 2008. After graduating she worked as a paid National Symphony Orchestra Education Intern at The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. She returned to Shepherd in 2009 when the position of Preparatory Division Coordinator and Music Department Program Assistant opened up, and stayed for more than two years.

"My experience as a music student at Shepherd was in many ways my introduction to a career in arts administration. As an assistant to the then-Music Department Chair, Dr. Mark McCoy, I handled logistics for marching band trips and assisted with coordinating the Honor Band program. As a member of Sigma Alpha Iota, I volunteered in the box office for music department performances. I was studying music education, but these 'behind the scenes' opportunities allowed me to see that there were many different career opportunities in the performing arts outside of teaching."

Since working for Shepherd followed the academic year, and summers were slower, she was able to accept a summer internship at the Kennedy Center with the Washington National Opera's Artistic Department. It was then that she decided that she wanted to work for an opera company. In the fall of 2011, she left Shepherd and moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, to attend the University of Cincinnati, where she completed an MBA and an MA in Arts Administration in 2013.

In Cincinnati, she worked as a Development Associate, Artistic Department Intern at the Cincinnati Opera and was a Graduate Assistant for the Opera Department at the University of Cincinnati College-Conservatory of Music. She took on the position of Associate Company

Manager at the Houston Grand Opera following her graduation from the University of Cincinnati. A year and a half later she was promoted to Company Manager.

In speaking of her Shepherd University Music experiences and how they helped shape her career, Oswald says, "Whenever I think about Shepherd, I remember the amazing relationships that I developed as a student. I am so grateful to have had Anne Munro as my private flute instructor, who is still one of my closest friends and mentors, but I valued my experience with each of my professors in the music department. I performed in the wind ensemble the year that we traveled to New York to perform at Carnegie Hall, which was truly an unforgettable experience."

FACULTY NEWS

Mark King (organ) performed at First Lutheran Church, Pittsburgh, PA on October 9. Repertoire included works by Denis Bedard, Dietrich Buxtehude, Rene Vierne and Max Reger.

Shepherd music faculty Dr. Yu-Hsuan Liao (piano) and Jeremy Koch (saxophone) have performed duo recital regularly around the region every year. They are scheduled to give three concerts in March 2017 around D.C. area.

Drs. Yu-Hsuan Liao, Laura Renninger, and Scott Beard presented Three's Company: Engaging Works for Piano Six Hands at the 2017 MTNA national conference, March 19-22, in Baltimore, MD.

Dr. Beard, Dr. Liao, and Dr. Renninger

Dr. David J. Gonzol, Professor of Music and Director of Music Education, has again this year been invited by the Maryland Symphony Orchestra and the Washington County Free Library of Maryland to give a lecture in the "Let's Talk Music" series. The orchestra is performing Gustav Holst's suite for large orchestra The Planets on March 18 and 19, and that is what Gonzol will be discussing. "Leonard Bernstein said in his 1972 Young People's Concert that The Planets has no special meaning, that Holst had no particular deep message," explained Gonzol. "Bernstein said it's just entertainment music—but that is not true. It really is about what we might call something like 'Cosmic Destiny.' It's a bit religious in nature, in fact. Extremely clever music, deeply expressive, and for a very deep message." This free lecture, "Cosmic Destiny: Star Wars and the Planets," will be given at the Washington County Free Library on Tuesday, March 14, at 5:30 pm. Dr. Scott Hippensteel, Associate Professor of Music, will be playing trombone with Gonzol. "Holst made his early living playing trombone in orchestra on the ends of seaside piers," Gonzol added. "He wrote most deliciously and prominently for trombone and other wind instruments, a real pioneer in the field."

Dr. Gonzol has also been invited to conduct the Shenandoah County, VA, All-County Elementary Choral Festival, April 7 and 8. The chorus will be singing "America," which was premiered by a children's chorus in 1931, Carl Orff and Gunild Keetman's "The Cuckoo Is a Clever Bird," with accompanying Orff instrumentarium, and Robert Schumann's "Frühlingsbotschaft" ("Spring Tidings"). The concert ends with two arrangements of American folk songs, Ruth Elaine Schram's "Oh, Shenandoah," and Emily Crocker's "Charlotte-Town." "The thing about Charlotte-Town, as a general music teacher, a Mr. Dvorak, explained to me long ago," said Gonzol, "is that Emily Crocker does an amazing thing: Every bar of music in both voices she took directly from one of three folk songs, except for four little bars. A great concert-closer, and the children will love it."

On May 21–24, Dr. Gonzol will be presenting at the prestigious Mountain Lake Colloquium for teachers of general music pedagogy. He will be discussing his research on Otto Rudolph Ortmann's theories of musical experience and what those theories imply for music education. "Last year, Jeffrey Groff and I had a presentation on Ortmann, at the American Association of Physics Teachers National Meeting," Gonzol said. Groff is an Associate Professor of Physics. "Ortmann was the first person to understand and publish the basic physical parameters of sound as science knows it today. He then tied that to what we might consider the first cognitive theory of music perception, and, further, to a philosophical explanation of the music experience. Ortmann does a kind of what they call a hat trick in hockey, with not only one but three major accomplishments in this field. Then he applied that to how we teach music rightly—and wrongly—since he gave us a much more accurate way of viewing reality, and of how music really gives its meaning to us. You can't teach cheap, inferior school music if you follow Ortmann. You've got to teach the exquisite stuff, folk song or symphony."

Andrew Staupé, the guest pianist with Maryland Symphony Orchestra concerts on Feb 11-12, 2017, came to Shepherd and gave a free piano masterclass on Friday February 10th at 1:00 pm. SHEPHERD SAXOPHONE QUARTET

Shepherd University's saxophone quartet performed in the Center for the Arts, Grand Tier on Saturday, January 7th during the 39th International Saxophone Symposium hosted by the Navy Band at George Mason University in Fairfax, VA. Their program included "Quatuor" by Alexander Glazunov, selections from the larger work "Ciudades" by Guillermo Lago, and "Ulla in Africa" by Heiner Wiberny.

"There were some individuals after our recital that came up to us and expressed how much they loved us and that they enjoyed every piece that we played," said Chase Remsburg. "Also, we had many compliments about the choice of pieces in our program and how it flowed elegantly."

Shepherd University Adjunct Professor of Saxophone, Master Sergeant Jeremy Koch, the principal saxophonist of the United States Air Force Band, attended the recital and said it was some of the best performing he has ever seen of the quartet.

Known for its excellent performances of music written before 1800, the ensemble is recognized as a staple of the cultural scene in the mid-Atlantic region. Established in 2011 by co-directors Ryan Mullaney and Lyle Nordstrom, Mountainside Baroque performances feature some of the finest professional musicians and specialists from across the country that come to play for a love of the music as well as for the beauty of the mountains.

Attracting audiences from the surrounding metropolitan and coastal areas, one of the hallmarks of Mountainside Baroque concerts is a consistent commitment to historically informed performance and the use of reproductions of instruments of the time, including lute, theorbo, recorder, viola da gamba, harpsichord, Baroque oboe, flute and bassoon, and Baroque violin, viola and cello.

On Thursday, February 23, 2017, old met new in a musical voyage through Europe and America as soprano Jaely Chamberlain and pianist Andrew Welch presented Neo-Antiquity from the Americas to the British Isles. Australian native Chamberlain has expertise that spans from the classical repertoire to the standards of jazz and musical theater. While at Shepherd, Chamberlain won the Outstanding Music Major Award in 2011-12 and graduated magna cum laude. She was a McMurran Scholar and a member of Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society. Chamberlain is currently based in the Mid-Atlantic region. Recent accolades include first prize in the 2016 MTNA Young Artist Performance Competition, second prize in the 2015 Kennett Symphony Orchestra Voice Competition, and an Encouragement Award from the 2015 Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. LITTLE WOMEN Shepherd University's Department of Music presented the Broadway musical "Little Women" on February 10, 11, and 12 in the Frank Center Theater. The show was directed and conducted by Dr. Rob Tudor, Chair of the Department of Music, with musical direction by Barbara Irvine, Adjunct Music Professor.

"Little Women," with music by Jason Howland, lyrics by Mindi Dickstein, and a book by Allan Knee, first opened on Broadway in 2005. Based on Louisa May Alcott's classic 1869 semi-autobiographical novel, "Little Women" focuses on the four March sisters—brassy, tomboy-like, aspiring writer Jo, romantic Meg, pretentious Amy, and kind-hearted Beth—and their beloved Marmee, at home in Concord, Massachusetts, while the family patriarch is away serving as a Union Army chaplain during the Civil War. Intercut with the vignettes in which their lives unfold are several recreations of the melodramatic short stories Jo writes in her attic studio.

The cast included Grace Guiney, as Beth March, Kai Fletcher as Aunt March, Jack Younis as John Brooke, Hailey Bricker as Meg March, John Wilkins as Professor Bhaer, Mary Sullivan as Amy March, Stephanie Proctor as Marmee, Alexandra Rosle as Jo March, Matthew Gray as Laurie Laurence, and Gerry Philp as Mr. Laurence.

In the spirit of the independent and creative force of the character Jo March, young women age 18 and under were admitted free to the Sunday matinee performance.

SHEPHERD MUSIC ON TOUR

This spring, the Shepherd University Music Department went on a recruitment tour to area high schools in Frederick, Washington, and Montgomery counties. The tour took place March 8-10, 2017 and we visited Linganore High School, Damascus

High School, Tuscarora High School, Governor Thomas Johnson High School Arts Academy, Watkins Mill High School, and Northwest High School. The program featured the Shepherd University Jazz Ensemble, Wind Ensemble, Chamber Singers,

Men's Choir, and smaller chamber ensembles, including piano and guitar. We were excited to share what Shepherd Music has to offer these music students and to take our groups "on the road!"

JAZZ LINES

We were excited to again host the Shepherd University Jazz Festival on Saturday, February 18. Last year's festival was a wonderful educational experience for the high school and middle school students in attendance. Each participating band performs on our Frank Center Theater stage and then moves to a room for a clinic with one of our outstanding clinicians.

This year's clinicians brought a wealth of musicianship and experience to share with the students. Xavier Perez is a tenor saxophonist with the U.S. Army Blues in Washington, D.C. and has toured the world with many notable jazz artists. Trombonist Ben Patterson joined us from the U.S. Air Force's premier jazz ensemble, The Airmen of Note. In addition to being an exceptional trombonist and educator, Patterson is also a noted composer and arranger for jazz ensemble.

Our third clinician was the newest member of our jazz faculty, guitarist Josh Walker. He is a noted jazz guitarist performing with many jazz and pop artists and maintains a busy performing and teaching schedule. We were delighted that he joined us as a member of our faculty and for the festival. This year's festival featured performances throughout the day culminating in a performance by the Shepherd Jazz Ensemble at 5:00pm featuring our clinicians as guest soloists.

Schools participating in this year's festival were Martinsburg South Middle School, Shepherdstown Middle School, Harpers Ferry Middle School, Wildwood Middle School, Hedgesville Middle School, Spring Mills High School, Washington High School, Jefferson High School, and Charles Town Middle School.

The jazz area also congratulates our jazz bass instructor Kevin Pace. Mr. Pace was selected to perform as part of a State Department tour to Azerbaijan. This is an exciting opportunity for Kevin to share our unique American art form.

We would also like to invite everyone to join us for two performances this semester. The first is the Salon Series recital with our jazz faculty on Thursday, March 23. On the recital, the faculty will be presenting the music of the great jazz composer and pianist, Thelonious Monk. We are all excited to share Monk's unique compositions with everyone.

Our student jazz ensemble and student combos celebrate jazz appreciation month with our spring concert in an exciting coffeehouse format. The concert will take place Thursday, April 20 at 7:00pm in the intimate setting of the Marinoff Theater. Listeners can relax with coffee and refreshments while getting up close and personal with the bands! We hope to see everyone at these and all of our fine concerts in the music department!

STUDENT NEWS

Tamar-Marie Tipton auditioned and was one of the only two clarinetists accepted into the the United States Air Force Collegiate Symposium 2017. She shares her experience here:

This weekend I stayed at the Westin Alexandria Hotel, all expenses paid by the United States Air Force Band. The first rehearsal was Friday afternoon, followed by a Meet-and-Greet dinner at the hotel. On Saturday, we ate breakfast, had another rehearsal, took a tour of the building and then had a Master Class. Isaac, the other guest clarinetist, and I had a one-on-one masterclass with the principal clarinetist of the band. I played an etude for her, and she complimented my playing and also gave me great tips for which to improve on. Afterward, we went back to the rehearsal space and had a question-and-answer session with some of the members of the band.

On Sunday we performed our concert, which was also lived streamed, at the Rachael M. Schlesinger Concert Hall and Arts center in Alexandria, VA. Before the concert a few students from the Symposium including myself were asked to do a mini interview about our experience and why we chose to audition for the Symposium. They also took a short video of my portion of the masterclass, which will also be in the video. Once the video is edited, it will be featured on their website. This weekend was an amazing experience and I'm so happy I had the opportunity to go!
